do all the good you can, by all the means you can...

There are times when the world's problems seem too big, too crazy, too complicated. What can one person do? Maybe you and I can't heal the world, but we can help our neighbors in their struggles.

We #DoTheGood we can.

Pathways' students in a correctional facility wanted to feel connected to the outside world & needed to develop job skills. How? The solution came through strong partnerships with a modular builder and the correctional facility. Students - many thought to be a burden to society - built the walls of an affordable home while serving their debt to society.

...all the times you can, to all the people you can.

By building the walls for that home, our students tore down the walls they were in and made a positive impact in their community. Their efforts changed the lives of the family that now calls that house home. That's how we solve the big problems: we all do all the good we can.

If the chaos outside is too much, remember those students who did what was within their reach, and do the good you can.

Your contribution - no matter how small - begins to make a difference.
